5 OF HOUSEBOAT PARTY DROWNED IN ST. PAUL

ATTEMPT TO ESCAPE FROM POLICE RAID

3 OTHER MEMBERS OF THE PARTY WERE RESCUED FROM MISSISSIPPI RIVER

OCCUPANTS FLED FROM HOUSEBOAT, PILING INTO SMALL ROWBOAT

St. Paul, Nov. 15.—The number of persons missing following the capsizing of a rowboat in the Mississippi river during a police raid early today shrank to five at noon today, when two of the seven at first believed dead were found.

No trace of the other five has been discovered. Both of the two members of the party who were located today were men. One swam to Harriet Island in the Mississippi and slept there overnight.

St. Paul, Nov. 15.—(UP)—Seven members of a houseboat party which was raided by police are believed to have drowned early today when the rowboat in which they attempted to escape was capsized in the Mississippi river.

Police listed their names as:

Charles Randall, owner of the houseboat.

Fay Chisholm, 38, a former policeman.

Michael Hogan, 25.

Nick Becker.

Harriet — (last name not learned).

Jane Pothon.

Joe Kanaley.

Three other members of the party were rescued from the river and taken to hospitals and two more who are alleged to have been too intoxicated to try to escape were arrested in the houseboat.

The raid was merely to have been a warning to the houseboat occupants that they were disturbing other river dwellers.

The occupants became alarmed, however, escaped through a rear door, piled into the rowboat and started for shore. The weight of the 10 persons was too great and the boat built to hold no more than five, sank after a few strokes.

"Bail, bail, bail," the police heard those in the rowboat shout.

A minute later cries of help were heard. Police set out in other boats and after desperate efforts, hauled Mrs. Nick Becker, 30; George LaValle, 23, and Miss Gertrude Swanson, 22, to safety.

Darkness prevented the police from seeing more than a dim outline of other struggling forms, but questioning of the rescued revealed that a total of nine were in the boat. Later Mrs. Becker recalled that a tenth person tried to escape and Kanaley's name was added to the list.

Although police believed seven drowned, it was admitted that any who swam to shore would not be eager to report his or her safety.

DRAGGING RIVER FOR THE BODIES

St. Paul, Nov. 15.—The Mississippi river here was dragged today for the bodies of six persons, three men and three women who are believed to have drowned late Sunday night when the rowboat in which they were attempting to flee from police was capsized.

The six were members of a houseboat party of 11 which disturbed other houseboat occupants and caused police to be sent to quiet them. Apparently fearing a raid, nine of the 11 piled into a rowboat.

The boat sank and three persons were saved from the water and taken to a hospital. Darkness prevented certain knowledge of what happened to the other six but they are believed to have drowned.

The six believed to have drowned were identified by police as: Charles Randall, a lunch room proprietor; Michael Hogan, 25; Harriet —, last name not learned; Nick Becker, Fay Chisholm and a woman known only by sight to others of the party.

The three who were rescued were: Mrs. Nick Becker, 30; George LaValle, 23; Gertrude Swanson, 22. Two others of the party—both men—were arrested aboard the houseboat and charged with intoxication.

QUEEN MARIE CURTAILS VISIT IN AMERICA

RUMANIA WANTS HER HOME ON CHRISTMAS EVE

ORIGINAL ITINERARY WILL BE CARRIED OUT IN FULL

By JOHN MONTGOMERY
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
Chicago, Nov. 15.—The sentimental value of Queen Marie's presence in Rumania on Christmas Eve today caused the curtailment of her American visit.

While the original itinerary will be carried out in full and even extended to include Atlantic City, White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., and Richmond, Va., the Florida visit on which her majesty had set her heart will be omitted. The visit to North and South Carolina is also in doubt due to plans of the royal party to board the White Star liner Majestic December 11.

Her majesty received a message from King Ferdinand last night demanding that she be in Bucharest during the Christmas holidays to allow him to carry out the usual custom of having his family about him at that season.

Ferdinand's cablegram means the cancellation of a number of social engagements in southern cities and as many more in Washington and New York. Tentative plans call for a four-day visit in Washington, two days in Atlantic City, while Prince Nicholas and Princess Helena attend the Army-Navy football game in Chicago, three days in White Sulphur Springs, a day in Richmond and possibly a day in Boston.

Today her majesty will journey to Gary, Ind., just south of Chicago to inspect the noted steel mills. While planned for the queen, Prince Nicholas, who has an insatiable appetite for industrial machinery, is expected to be the most interested member of the royal party.

COOLIDGE IN DRAFT OF HIS ANNUAL MESSAGE

FROM ALL INDICATIONS, PRESIDENT WILL MAKE IT A BRIEF ONE

TO CONTAIN FEW RECOMMENDATIONS OR SUGGESTIONS FOR LEGISLATION

By WILLIAM J. McEVROY
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
Washington, Nov. 15.—With only three weeks before congress assemblies, President Coolidge today began a draft of his annual message to that body.

From all indications the president's annual report will be comparatively brief, containing very few new recommendations or suggestions for legislation.

The administration's credit tax plan, announced 10 days ago by the White House will be the high light of the message. He will recommend that $250,000,000 surplus be returned to taxpayers as a credit on taxes due next March on incomes of this year.

Democratic demands for downward revision on all income rates will be answered. The president is expected also to touch on Muscle Shoals, the merchant marine, economy and prosperity.

Any reference to foreign affairs will be based on his Armistice Day speech in Kansas City in which he served notice that the United States would not enter the world court unless the United States reservations were accepted by all members of the tribunal.

PREDICT TROPICAL DISTURBANCE OFF YUCATAN COAST

Washington, Nov. 15.—(UP)—With almost springlike temperatures prevailing along the seaboard the weather bureau had warnings out today that a slight tropical disturbance off Yucatan might curve north and northwest and strike Florida, Alabama, Texas and the West Indian Islands.

Washington, Nov. 15.—(UP)—Two North American storm areas, both of which may endanger shipping along the United States coast, was reported by the weather bureau here.

A tropical disturbance of slight or moderate intensity is centered east of Yucatan, but has curved north or northeast and may sweep across Florida. No strong winds have been reported to the bureau and unless the storm increases no damage except to shipping is expected.

Southeast storm warnings were ordered displayed from Delaware Breakwater to Eastport, Me., and gales along the northern Atlantic coast were forecast as a result of a storm area of marked intensity now centered over Lake Superior and moving northeast.

FARM RELIEF UP AT THE EXTRA SESSION

COL. BROOKHART WANTS EXTRA SESSION TO CONSIDER RELIEF MEASURES

URGES IT BE CALLED IMMEDIATELY AFTER SHORT SESSION ENDING MAR. 4

Washington, Nov. 15.—(UP)—Demand for an extra session of congress to consider farm relief legislation was made by Colonel Smith W. Brookhart, republican, today in his first public statement since his recent election to the United States senate from Iowa.

Brookhart said he favored calling the extra session immediately following the short session which adjourns March 4. He would start the short session off by placing farm relief bills ahead of the appropriation bills on the calendar. It is not so important that the appropriation bills be passed before June, while there is urgent demand for legislative relief for agriculture, the colonel stated.

STORM WARNINGS ON GREAT LAKES

GALE EXPECTED TO SWEEP CONSIN TODAY OR TONIGHT

Milwaukee, Wis., Nov. 15.—(UP)—Storm warnings have been posted along Lakes Michigan and Superior announcing the approach of another storm which is expected to sweep Wisconsin some time today or tonight.

Winds of near gale proportions are expected and the mercury is to drop a few points.

TESTIMONY OF WOMAN NEEDED IN STATE'S CASE

TRIAL NOW ENTERING ITS THIRD WEEK AT SOMERVILLE TODAY

MRS. GIBSON IMPROVING SINCE RECENT BLOOD TRANS- FUSION

By PAUL W. WHITE
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
Somerville, N. J., Nov. 15.—Mrs. Jane Gibson will tell her story of the killing of Rev. Dr. Edward W. Hall and Mrs. Eleanor Mills from a stretcher either tomorrow or Wednesday, Senator Alexander Simpson, special prosecutor, has announced.

As the trial enters its third week today, it became apparent that the state's case had reached the point where it was almost essential to introduce testimony to connect Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall and her brothers, Willie and Henry Stevens, directly with the murders in DeRusse's Lane, if the prosecution is to reach its objective—the conviction of the defendants in the case.

Mrs. Gibson, who is in the Hudson county hospital in Jersey City where she was taken a week ago under orders from Simpson, was reported to be improving since a blood transfusion operation last Thursday.

Love letters written by Mrs. Mills to Dr. Hall have yet to be read to the jury.

Senator Simpson said he might read the letters today. They were found on a September morning in 1922, strewn around the bodies of Dr. Hall and Mrs. Mills who were slain as they kept a tryst on the Phillips' farm near New Brunswick.

On Saturday Simpson read fervent missives from Dr. Hall to his choir singer sweetheart.

The rector's widow well withstood the strain as she sat between her brothers.

Senator Simpson said he planned to attack Mrs. Hall's story as to ignorance of the affair between Dr. Hall and Mrs. Mills by calling witnesses to testify to the widespread gossip concerning the couple.

When Barbara Tough, former servant in the Hall home, was on the stand last week, she named under protest some of the persons with whom she had gossiped. These have been subpoenaed by the prosecutor.

Another witness scheduled to take the stand today is Mrs. Elsie Barnhardt, sister of Mrs. Mills, who spent several months with the choir singer during the flowering of the romance. Mrs. Barnhardt is expected to testify that her sister was fearful of Mrs. Minna Clark, Sunday school teacher in Dr. Hall's church.

Other witnesses who may take the stand today included John Stillwell, hearse driver, who told the grand jury there were scratches on Mrs. Hall's face, when she attended her husband's funeral.

Court Room, Somerville, Nov. 15.—Two major bits of circumstantial evidence were added to the state's case against Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall, and her brother, Henry and Willie Stevens, accused of murdering the Rev. Edward W. Hall and Mrs. Eleanor R. Mills, within a few minutes after court opened today.

Alfred Butler, a taxi-driver, told of having seen Henry Carpenter, a cousin of Mrs. Hall, leave the Hall house with a "bundle and some boxes" 36 hours after the murder. Carpenter is awaiting trial for alleged complicity in the murder.

Edward Stillwell, an undertaker's assistant, testified that he saw Mrs. Hall at the funeral of her husband and that her face showed scratches. The state contends the scratches formed evidence that she had been in a struggle.

Stillwell said Mrs. Hall wore a veil but that at one time she raised the veil to dry her eyes with a handkerchief and that the scratches were plainly visible.

On cross examination the witness was asked if he still was employed by an undertaker.

"No, sir, I work in a bank."

THOUSAND ARE HOMELESS AFTER TOKIO FIRE

Tokio, Nov. 15.—(UP)—A thousand persons were homeless today after a great fire which swept before high winds through the suburbs.

In the suburb of North Shinagawa, 14 factory buildings and 50 houses were destroyed. Fifteen factories and 240 houses were wiped out in Nippon.

Damage was estimated at 500,000 yen.

ANTICIPATE FORMAL END OF COAL STRIKE

BRITISH SUBJECTS TO VOTE ON ACCEPTANCE OF GOVERN- MENT'S TERMS

THOUSANDS OF BRITISH MINERS RETURNING TO THE PITS

London, Nov. 15.—(UP)—Anticipating formal ending of the mine strike Thursday when districts will vote on acceptance of the government's terms, thousands of British miners were returning to the pits today.

Although there is still the possibility that the strikers will reject the settlement recommended by their delegates, it was generally considered that the strike is virtually ended.

Knowing that the 300,000 men, who already have returned to work, are to be given the preference and that they must compete for the remaining jobs, of which there are 205,000 less than when the strike began six months ago, the miners were hurrying back to grasp the earliest opportunity to obtain their old places.

A picture of the effect of the strike on Britain was drawn by Sir William Johnson-Hicks, home secretary, in a speech at Barnstable, in which he said the stoppage had nearly ruined the country.

"It has been a period of agony almost as terrible as that during the great war," Sir William said. "It has involved a loss of nearly $2,000,000,000."

SEN. LA FOLLETTE WANTS TO CURB POWER OF PRESIDENT

Madison, Wis., Nov. 15.—(UP)—Power of the president to dismiss officials under civil service without the consent of the senate recently affirmed by the United States supreme court would be nullified by a proposed constitutional amendment which Senator Robert M. La Follette today announced he would introduce at the coming session of congress.

"What do you do?" asked Case. "I don't want to answer."

"Well, you'd better."

"I am elevator operator."

Despite exhaustive questioning by Case, Stillwell stuck to his story.

He said he had noticed Mrs. Hall's face while the funeral party was on a ferryboat enroute to Brooklyn where Dr. Hall was buried.

Mrs. Elsie Barnhardt, younger sister of Mrs. Eleanor Mills, told the jury secrets of the romance between her sister and the Rev. Edward Wheeler Hall.

She testified that Mrs. Mills told her she "cared more for Dr. Hall's little finger than for Jimmy Mills' whole hand."

That Mrs. Mills planned to "go away to Japan with Dr. Hall."

That Mrs. Mills did not care who knew of her romance with the minister.

That Mrs. Hall and Mrs. Mills were not friendly and once she saw Mrs. Hall refuse to enter an automobile in which Mrs. Mills was a passenger.

That the minister and Mrs. Mills often met in Buechleuch Park, New Brunswick, where they would go over Hall's sermons together.

Senator Alexander Simpson, prosecuting the case, told the United Press that he would take no action on reports made to state police by Charlotte Mills that she had seen a defense attorney in conversation with a member of the jury. The matter was passed over as having no bearing on the case.

WOOD WILL BE HAULED HERE FOR CLOQUET

FARMERS CAN OBTAIN INFORMATION FROM OFFICE OF NORTH- WEST PAPER CO.

PREDICTED TO OPEN A NEW FIELD FOR EMPLOYMENT IN CROW WING COUNTY

The Northwest Paper Co. of Brainerd, today issued a call for orders to farmers and others for 3,000 to 5,000 cords of jackpine pulpwood for shipment here for the Cloquet mills.

This announcement comes with special interest to Brainerd and the county as it means the starting of a new field to stimulate labor in the woods and city.

Farmers and others contemplating cutting of jackpine pulpwood are requested to apply to The Northwest Paper Co. office for particulars.

Purchase of the jackpine pulpwood is being done by the office here for the Cloquet mills. The pulpwood will be loaded on cars next summer and shipped. The call for orders predicts the establishment of a regular industry for winter months and will be an output for jackpine lands.

Experiments have been conducted with jackpine pulpwood with the result that the Cloquet mills now are putting out paper from the product. It is especially adapted for the making of heavy wrapping paper, cover stock paper and envelope stock.

The Cloquet mills last year made paper out of jackpine. They have completed experiments where jackpine can be made a steady supply. The wood required is 8 foot lengths but further specifications can be obtained from the office.

If successful in getting 5,000 cords this year, the order may be enlarged to 10,000 cords next year, and continued annually thereafter.

LEGION SHOWS HONORS TO LATE "UNCLE JOE"

Danville, Ill., Nov. 15.—(UP)—Guarded by eight past commanders of the Curtin Redden post of the American Legion, the body of "Uncle Joe" Cannon lay in his bedroom here today, while hundreds filed past to pay their last respects.

Yesterday it was estimated that 6,000 people saw the body.

Somerville, N. J., Nov. 15.—Mrs. Jane Gibson will tell her story of the killing of Rev. Dr. Edward W. Hall and Mrs. Eleanor Mills from a stretcher either tomorrow or Wednesday, Senator Alexander Simpson, special prosecutor, has announced.

As the trial enters its third week today, it became apparent that the state's case had reached the point where it was almost essential to introduce testimony to connect Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall and her brothers, Willie and Henry Stevens, directly with the murders in DeRusse's Lane, if the prosecution is to reach its objective—the conviction of the defendants in the case.

Mrs. Gibson, who is in the Hudson county hospital in Jersey City where she was taken a week ago under orders from Simpson, was reported to be improving since a blood transfusion operation last Thursday.

Love letters written by Mrs. Mills to Dr. Hall have yet to be read to the jury.

Senator Simpson said he might read the letters today. They were found on a September morning in 1922, strewn around the bodies of Dr. Hall and Mrs. Mills who were slain as they kept a tryst on the Phillips' farm near New Brunswick. On Saturday Simpson read fervent missives from Dr. Hall to his choir singer sweetheart.

The rector's widow well withstood the strain as she sat between her brothers.

Senator Simpson said he planned to attack Mrs. Hall's story as to ignorance of the affair between Dr. Hall and Mrs. Mills by calling witnesses to testify to the widespread gossip concerning the couple.

When Barbara Tough, former servant in the Hall home, was on the stand last week, she named under protest some of the persons with whom she had gossiped. These have been subpoenaed by the prosecutor.

Another witness scheduled to take the stand today is Mrs. Elsie Barnhardt, sister of Mrs. Mills, who spent several months with the choir singer during the flowering of the romance. Mrs. Barnhardt is expected to testify that her sister was fearful of Mrs. Minna Clark, Sunday school teacher in Dr. Hall's church.

Other witnesses who may take the stand today included John Stillwell, hearse driver, who told the grand jury there were scratches on Mrs. Hall's face, when she attended her husband's funeral.

Court Room, Somerville, Nov. 15.—Two major bits of circumstantial evidence were added to the state's case against Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall, and her brother, Henry and Willie Stevens, accused of murdering the Rev. Edward W. Hall and Mrs. Eleanor R. Mills, within a few minutes after court opened today.

Alfred Butler, a taxi-driver, told of having seen Henry Carpenter, a cousin of Mrs. Hall, leave the Hall house with a "bundle and some boxes" 36 hours after the murder. Carpenter is awaiting trial for alleged complicity in the murder.

Edward Stillwell, an undertaker's assistant, testified that he saw Mrs. Hall at the funeral of her husband and that her face showed scratches. The state contends the scratches formed evidence that she had been in a struggle.

Stillwell said Mrs. Hall wore a veil but that at one time she raised the veil to dry her eyes with a handkerchief and that the scratches were plainly visible.

On cross examination the witness was asked if he still was employed by an undertaker.

"No, sir, I work in a bank."

THOUSAND ARE HOMELESS AFTER TOKIO FIRE

Tokio, Nov. 15.—(UP)—A thousand persons were homeless today after a great fire which swept before high winds through the suburbs.

In the suburb of North Shinagawa, 14 factory buildings and 50 houses were destroyed. Fifteen factories and 240 houses were wiped out in Nippon.

Damage was estimated at 500,000 yen.

ANTICIPATE FORMAL END OF COAL STRIKE

BRITISH SUBJECTS TO VOTE ON ACCEPTANCE OF GOVERNMENT'S TERMS

THOUSANDS OF BRITISH MINERS RETURNING TO THE PITS

London, Nov. 15.—(UP)—Anticipating formal ending of the mine strike Thursday when districts will vote on acceptance of the government's terms, thousands of British miners were returning to the pits today.

Although there is still the possibility that the strikers will reject the settlement recommended by their delegates, it was generally considered that the strike is virtually ended.

Knowing that the 300,000 men, who already have returned to work, are to be given the preference and that they must compete for the remaining jobs, of which there are 205,000 less than when the strike began six months ago, the miners were hurrying back to grasp the earliest opportunity to obtain their old places.

A picture of the effect of the strike on Britain was drawn by Sir William Johnson-Hicks, home secretary, in a speech at Barnstable, in which he said the stoppage had nearly ruined the country.

"It has been a period of agony almost as terrible as that during the great war," Sir William said. "It has involved a loss of nearly $2,000,000,000."

SEN. LA FOLLETTE WANTS TO CURB POWER OF PRESIDENT

Madison, Wis., Nov. 15.—(UP)—Power of the president to dismiss officials under civil service without the consent of the senate recently affirmed by the United States supreme court would be nullified by a proposed constitutional amendment which Senator Robert M. La Follette today announced he would introduce at the coming session of congress.

"What do you do?" asked Case. "I don't want to answer."

"Well, you'd better."

"I am elevator operator."

Despite exhaustive questioning by Case, Stillwell stuck to his story. He said he had noticed Mrs. Hall's face while the funeral party was on a ferryboat enroute to Brooklyn where Dr. Hall was buried.

Mrs. Elsie Barnhardt, younger sister of Mrs. Eleanor Mills, told the jury secrets of the romance between her sister and the Rev. Edward Wheeler Hall.

She testified that Mrs. Mills told her she "cared more for Dr. Hall's little finger than for Jimmy Mills' whole hand."

That Mrs. Mills planned to "go away to Japan with Dr. Hall."

That Mrs. Mills did not care who knew of her romance with the minister.

That Mrs. Hall and Mrs. Mills were not friendly and once she saw Mrs. Hall refuse to enter an automobile in which Mrs. Mills was a passenger.

That the minister and Mrs. Mills often met in Buccleuch Park, New Brunswick, where they would go over Hall's sermons together.

Senator Alexander Simpson, prosecuting the case, told the United Press that he would take no action on reports made to state police by Charlotte Mills that she had seen a defense attorney in conversation with a member of the jury. The matter was passed over as having no bearing on the case.

WOOD WILL BE HAULED HERE FOR CLOQUET

FARMERS CAN OBTAIN INFORMATION FROM OFFICE OF NORTHWEST PAPER CO.

PREDICTED TO OPEN A NEW FIELD FOR EMPLOYMENT IN CROW WING COUNTY

The Northwest Paper Co. of Brainerd, today issued a call for orders to farmers and others for 3,000 to 5,000 cords of jackpine pulpwood for shipment here for the Cloquet mills.

This announcement comes with special interest to Brainerd and the county as it means the starting of a new field to stimulate labor in the woods and city.

Farmers and others contemplating cutting of jackpine pulpwood are requested to apply to The Northwest Paper Co. office for particulars.

Purchase of the jackpine pulpwood is being done by the office here for the Cloquet mills. The pulpwood will be loaded on cars next summer and shipped. The call for orders predicts the establishment of a regular industry for winter months and will be an output for jackpine lands.

Experiments have been conducted with jackpine pulpwood with the result that the Cloquet mills now are putting out paper from the product. It is especially adapted for the making of heavy wrapping paper, cover stock paper and envelope stock.

The Cloquet mills last year made paper out of jackpine. They have completed experiments where jackpine can be made a steady supply. The wood required is 8 foot lengths but further specifications can be obtained from the office.

If successful in getting 5,000 cords this year, the order may be enlarged to 10,000 cords next year, and continued annually thereafter.

LEGION SHOWS HONORS TO LATE "UNCLE JOE"

Danville, Ill., Nov. 15.—(UP)—Guarded by eight past commanders of the Curtin Redden post of the American Legion, the body of "Uncle Joe" Cannon lay in his bedroom here today, while hundreds filed past to pay their last respects.

Intermingled with Danville citizens in the long line awaiting admittance to the home are persons from all over the country, friends of Uncle Joe.

Yesterday it was estimated that 6,000 people saw the body.

COUNT SALM WANTS SEPARATION BUT NOT DIVORCE

Paris, Nov. 15.—(UP)—Count Salm von Hoogstraaten has arrived in Paris en route to the United States where he expected to be present the latter part of this month when his suit for separation from the former Millicent Rogers, "Standard Oil heiress," is held in court.

"I never will divorce Millicent," the count told reporters, "but I certainly expect to obtain a separation."

Dear friends:

What would you think of a lawyer who took your case and then went around over town telling folks all about it?

So would I!

Same way in buying jewelry. There are times when you'd really prefer that nobody knew what you were buying in the gift line—an engagement ring—for instance.

That is a service you get at this store without asking for it. The folks here understand that rule and abide by it. The boss is absolutely hard-boiled on that subject.

Dear friends:
What would you think of a lawyer who took your case and then went around over town telling folks all about it?

So would I!

Same way in buying jewelry. There are times when you'd really prefer that nobody knew what you were buying in the gift line—an engagement ring—for instance.

That is a service you get at this store without asking for it. The folks here understand that rule and abide by it. The boss is absolutely hard-boiled on that subject.

Individuality in Autumn Fashions

Distinction and Variety Characterize Popular Modes for Fall.

Individuality in dress has never been given more definite and more delightful expression than that in the styles of this season. Among the advance models from the fall collections, writes a fashion correspondent in the New York Times, are gowns for every type and each of these in many variants. "Occasion" is really a slogan in gowns as well as in millinery in the endeavor of couturiers and milliners to reach more distinction than the fancies of several seasons past. The silhouette takes several forms, all equally fashionable, as expressed in designs for afternoon wear.

One may have, according to preference, a straight-line frock, relieved only by plaits; the dolman design; circular flouncing; and, in the softer arrangement of drapery, the uneven hem line. Of these the dolman blouse, the lift front and the unpressed box-plaited clusters are striking features. Waistcoats, girdles and belts are worn with the most of the models and an effort is evident in some to define the normal waistline. But this is done with success only in the styles created for youthful and very slim figures.

Ensemble is the correct mode for daytime and evening, for costumes of formal as well as informal occasions, in which a harmony of scheme is worked out in every detail of fabric, line and color. There is no remnant of an antiquated idea of hit-or-miss in the present season's dress. There is a wrap for every gown and several to meet every demand of a woman's social activities. One wrap, except of fur, is not accepted as the answer to several costumes, but is for convenience and general utility.

Gowns and Wraps.

There is an intimate artistic partnership between the new gowns and wraps, for the same materials are invariably introduced in some arrangement in both, a standard which has challenged the imagination and skill evident in the models shown by both French and American designers. A significant note in the new version of the ensemble is the short coat, which is a happy solution of costume for autumn, especially adapted to the use of wool fabrics. Jenny, who is departing from her usual charming conventionalism, is doing some extremely smart ensembles in which the frock, finished in itself, has a short coat which completes the costume and adds a degree of comfort and convenience. In this ensemble two colors of kasha, gray and green, are worked together in panel and mosaic insets and bands that follow a geometric pattern. The lines of Jenny's model are straight and flat, with inverted box plaits at each side giving freedom of movement. The coat, which ends at the hip line, is boxy in cut, with square, conspicuous outside pockets outlined with narrow stitched bands of cloth which define the cuffs, sleeve and collar. Not an inch of fur is used on this smart little outfit, which is both chic and serviceable.

An ensemble designed by Molyneux has a coat of three-quarter length and a collar of rabbit fur, extended down each side of the front to of the edge of the hem. The cuffs are of fur and a muff, medium in size and flat in shape, is shown with the suit. The lines of this costume are severely straight, the skirt perfectly plain and narrow, the coat cut minus a ripple, and all of one supple diagonal cloth. Fur trimming appears to be a matter of individual taste, for the newest ensembles are shown with or without fur collars.

The Use of Fur.

In one of the most intriguing costumes seen thus far, called a suit by Premet, fur is introduced in an original and altogether luxurious manner. Without presenting winter weight, a suggestion of warmth is given to a softly tailored frock of myrtle green velours led by the use of a novelty fur—black susliki—making a striking contrast of color. The bodice of this interesting frock is cut in the high-collared style of the Russian blouse, the lower part of which is drawn in wrinkles about the hip, and caught in a slightly lifted motif with a cluster of gathers directly in front. A band of the fur is added to the bottom of the blouse, drawn tight around the hip, straight along the lower edge and with an upward curve in front. Cuffs and a collar having long stole ends tied cravat-fashion at one side are also of the fur.

The ripple which appears in so many of the latest models is done with much success by Vionnet in an ensemble of black velours de laine, for both the one-piece frock and its accompanying coat, which is three-quarter length and has a shawl collar and cuffs of novelty fur in two shades of gray. In these three-piece suits, as they are called, the coat is invariably made without a formal fastening, as in the coats that are intended to be used as separate wraps. The short coat and the bolero, each a part of the suit, give an appearance of a complete costume that fills admirably the interim between the fall and winter styles. Drecoll, who has always done clever things with the bolero, is presenting this season a smart version of the two-piece frock, introducing under a straight-cut jacket a waistcoat that ends in a girdle drawn about the hips upward to the middle of the back, where it is fastened with diagonally crossed lines. The suit is made of black velvet, severely plain except in front, where the skirt is laid in four box plaits. The waistcoat is of pink satin, making the fashionable color contrast, and a full long scarf of black fox is shown with the ensemble.

The Straight Line.

Another silhouette emphasizes the season's styles of straight line, the bodice ending at the knees. This is a late interpretation of the jumper suit in which the skirt presents the appearance of a founce, plaited all around or in a cluster in front. Sleeves are long and plain or full gathered, and collars are of several designs. One is the youthful soft Eton, the round or oval revers, and the turtle, with erect band of material and cravat ends. Most all of the gowns, especially the softly tailored models, have some sort of scarf tie attached at the neck, but as a part of the dress. The separate scarf of crepe or chiffon is being replaced by the fur piece or ostrich boa.

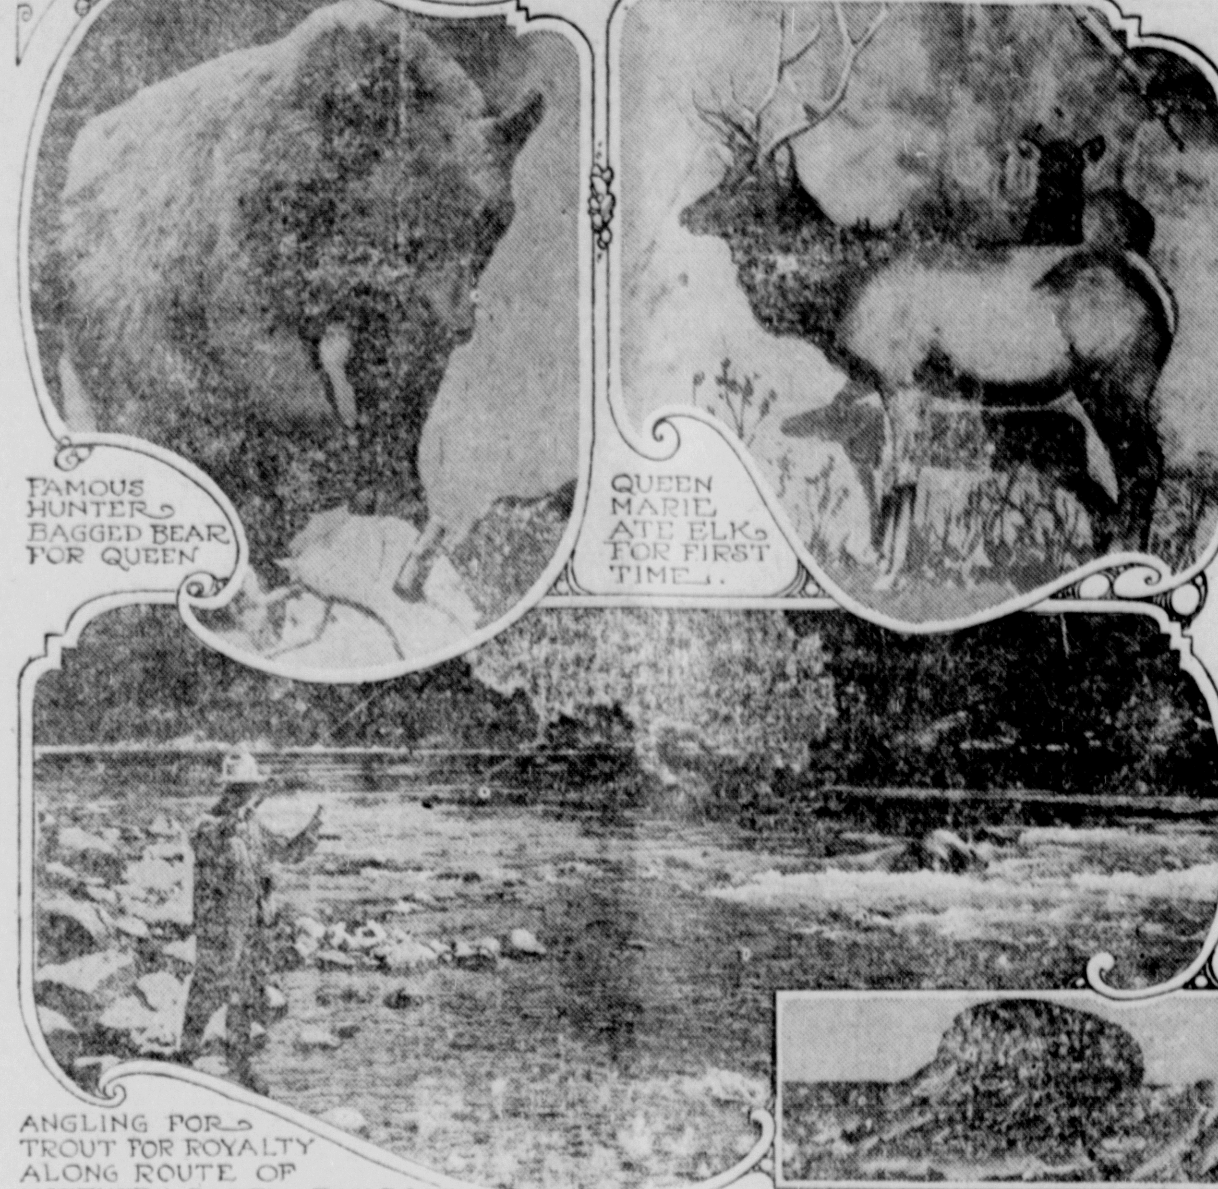

A lovely afternoon costume from the Lanvin atelier illustrates a movement considered now modish, and the vogue of black velvet for afternoon. In this particular model the softly bloused bodice drops over the open tunic, which is lifted directly in front over a tight, straight skirt. A sash of the velvet is tied about the low waistline, finished with a bow and long ends in the middle front. A naive little turnover collar, deep cuffs and tips on the sash-ends are made of pale gray rabbit fur. Martial et Armand are going in strong for both the lifted front drapery and the blouse effect in bodice, establishing some modes that are decidedly out of the ordinary, especially in an afternoon dress in which they combine two materials.

A revival in fashions is the dolman, now adapted to the bodice of a gown, and especially good in the afternoon costume. There is a suggestion of the kimono in the lines, voluminous and supple, with the wide dolman contrasting to the drapery tightly swathing the figure, with the fullness swung toward the front and lifted.

A dolman gown in which the full upper part contrasts strikingly to the slim effect of the drapery is done in myrtle green velvet and bengaline, with mink tails trimming the sleeves at the wrists, and added in a cluster of three at the back of the neck. The two new features, the dolman bodice and the lifted line in front drapery, are shown together in some of the latest models.

In one from Martial et Armand the blouse is draped at the back in baggy fullness over the girdle, which is pulled up sharply to the middle of the front and finished with an ornament. This particular afternoon costume is built of soft brown zibeline, and the belt of the cloth, stitched, is fastened with a clasp of burnished Burnese gold.

Northwest Hunters Bag Game for Royalty

FAMOUS HUNTER BAGGED BEAR FOR QUEEN

QUEEN MARIE ATE ELKS FOR FIRST TIME

ANGLING FOR TROUT FOR ROYALTY ALONG ROUTE OF NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD

MOUNTAIN TROUT

ELK and bear, rainbow trout, the aristocrat of American game fish and other comparatively rare food delicacies graced the table of Queen Marie of Rumania on her westward journey aboard the "Royal Rumanian," the special train of ten cars provided by the Baltimore & Ohio and Northern Pacific railroads for her trip across the United States.

"Pretty" Dick Randall, guide and pal of the late President Roosevelt, the Chippewa Indian Tribe of Minnesota, Ray Hill, veteran rancher, and other picturesque hunters and sportsmen beat the woods and whipped the streams to provide Queen Marie and her entourage with the finest our American Northwest boasts in game fish and wild game and fowl.

Minnesota and Montana had the honor of supplying most of the tempting wild dishes. William Martin, traveling chef, who is cooking for Queen Marie on the "Yellowstone," official car of the Northern Pacific, which is her traveling apartment, prepared real American menus on the Northwest trip. Wild game and game fish menus predominated as the special sped westward.

Pioneer and "dude" ranchers hunted and fished with Randall and Hill in filling Queen Marie's larder with the typical American food, on which the pathfinders and pioneers of the Northwest subsisted in early days.

Randall is known as one of the great bear hunters of the American Rockies. He set forth from the O. T. O. "dude" ranch near Gardiner, Montana, and went directly to the Absaraka Mountains. When the special train reached Livingston there was plenty of bear meat ready for the royal table.

Hill led a party of hunters from Karat's Kold Spring Ranch near Bozeman, Montana, into the Gallatin Mountains, where they found elk in abundance. When the "Royal Rumanian" reached Bozeman, elk meat was placed on the tables of the distinguished visitors. Rainbow trout, from their native haunts in icy streams in the Mission Ranges of the Montana Rockies, were secured by W. W. Binko of Binko's Clearwater Ranch, Missoula, Montana.

Wild duck and geese were bagged in abundance in Minnesota by the Chippewa Indians, who also harvested wild rice from the marshes for inclusion on the royal menu, thus adding another food to the growing list of dishes never before tasted by the Queen.

The Joke When They Met

By RUTH ARNOLD

(Copyright.)

ELLEN BURKE, sitting in her chair of the pullman as the long train drew into the station at Philadelphia, tucked Peggy O'Connell's letter safely in her handbag. Ellen and Peggy had met on shipboard going to Europe a few months before with their respective parents, and had formed an enthusiastic friendship. This was helped along because Mr. and Mrs. Burke and Mr. and Mrs. O'Connell found each other congenial. On the way home—for the Burkes and O'Connells had purposely returned to America by the same ship—Peggy had exacted a promise from Ellen to visit her as soon as she had unpacked her trunks. Ellen lived in a New York apartment. Peggy lived in a country house outside Philadelphia. And the two girls planned many good times in exchanged visits.

"As soon as you reach Broad Street station," Peggy had written, "you telephone my brother, Bob." And then she had given his telephone number and his office address. "He'll be expecting you and will pick you up at the station and bring you out home."

Ellen had heard much from Peggy. In their many talks together that summer, about her brother, John. And it must be admitted that part of her excitement at again seeing Peggy was that she would meet this paragon of a brother who, according to his sister, was as good as he was handsome, as popular as he was charming.

Ellen knew something of Philadelphia. And when there was some delay in getting John's office telephone, she realized that she was only a few steps from his office.

"I'll just pop around and wait there," she thought. "It will save him trouble, and I'm early. I'd rather wait there than here."

So, carrying her small gray suitcase and matching hatbox, Peggy walked the square or two to John O'Connell's office. She hesitatingly opened the door labeled "John O'Connell, lawyer," opened and entered a small waiting room. The room was full—gray crepe de chine, not elaborate, but yet unmistakably expensive. She and Peggy had shopped for it together in Paris.

Just as she had taken in all her surroundings a door marked private opened, and a homely, thirty-year-old woman, dressed in blue serge, serviceable and plain, emerged.

Behind her came a young man. Ellen's heart skipped a beat. It was John—she knew from a photograph Peggy always carried with her.

"You can all go, now," he said to the other waiting girls. "The position is filled."

The other girls went out of the room. Ellen flushed and half smiled at John.

"What are you waiting for?" he asked crisply. "Here, come in here a minute."

"But," stammered Ellen, "I'm—"

She followed him into his office. "I know, I know. But the job is filled. And just for your own good, let me tell you that you'll never get the kind of job a nice girl like you wants if you dress in duds like those. Did you see that girl I hired? Plain and reliable. The kind of woman a man likes to have around all day. Not ugly, but just not noticeable, and sure to have her mind on something besides clothes. Now you—anybody'd know you were thinking more about your looks than your work—and that doesn't do in an office."

"Don't feel offended," said the young man. "I'm just trying to give you a bit of advice."

"But you're so stupid," said Ellen, as the door marked "Private" closed. And she picked up her two pretty little gray bags and walked back to the station. There she boarded the next local train to Peggy's home and explained to Peggy, when she got there, that she hadn't been able to get her brother on the telephone. So Peggy promptly telephoned her brother not to wait.

When Ellen and John met that evening, John's eyes were openly admiring. Ellen, in pink tulle, with bare arms and no hat, did not at first recall the vision of gray that had disturbed his office calm that afternoon.

It was not until the next day when she and Peggy had luncheon with him at a hotel that he recognized the woman gray Ellen as his office visitor.

The Standard Fire Insurance Company, Hartford, Connecticut.

"Well, by jove," he said, "the middle of a mouthful of grapefruit, and he flushed and stammered more than Ellen had done the day before. "Why—what must you have thought?"

Ellen, by this time sure that John was all that Peggy had claimed for him—and more—smiled shyly.

"Well, what I thought then—doesn't matter—any more than what you did, does it?"

And then they both laughed and told Peggy the joke. And all three knew, though they said nothing of the knowledge, that Ellen and John would laugh all their lives together over their first meeting.

A revival in fashions is the dolman, now adapted to the bodice of a gown, and especially good in the afternoon costume. There is a suggestion of the kimono in the lines, voluminous and supple, with the wide dolman contrasting to the drapery tightly swathing the figure, with the fullness swung toward the front and lifted.

A dolman gown in which the full upper part contrasts strikingly to the slim effect of the drapery is done in myrtle green velvet and bengaline, with mink tails trimming the sleeves at the wrists, and added in a cluster of three at the back of the neck. The two new features, the dolman bodice and the lifted line in front drapery, are shown together in some of the latest models.

In one from Martial et Armand the blouse is draped at the back in baggy fullness over the girdle, which is pulled up sharply to the middle of the front and finished with an ornament. This particular afternoon costume is built of soft brown zibeline, and the belt of the cloth, stitched, is fastened with a clasp of burnished Burnese gold.

Northwest Hunters Bag Game for Royalty

FAMOUS HUNTER BAGGED BEAR FOR QUEEN

QUEEN MARIE BAGGED ELK FOR FIRST TIME

ANGLING FOR TROUT FOR ROYALTY ALONG ROUTE OF NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD

ELK and bear, rainbow trout, the aristocrat of American game fish and other comparatively rare food delicacies graced the table of Queen Marie of Rumania on her westward journey aboard the "Royal Rumanian," the special train of ten cars provided by the Baltimore & Ohio and Northern Pacific railroads for her trip across the United States.

"Pretty" Dick Randall, guide and pal of the late President Roosevelt, the Chippewa Indian Tribe of Minnesota, Ray Hill, veteran rancher, and other picturesque hunters and sportsmen beat the woods and whipped the streams to provide Queen Marie and her entourage with the finest American Northwest boasts in game fish and wild game and fowl.

Minnesota and Montana had the honor of supplying most of the tempting wild dishes. William Martin, traveling chef, who is cooking for Queen Marie on the "Yellowstone," official car of the Northern Pacific, which is her traveling apartment, prepared real American menus on the Northwestern trip. Wild game and game fish menus predominated as the special sped westward.

Pioneer and "dude" ranchers hunted and fished with Randall and Hill in filling Queen Marie's larder with the typical American food, on which the pathfinders and pioneers of the Northwest subsisted in early days.

Randall is known as one of the great bear hunters of the American Rockies. He set forth from the O. T. O. "dude" ranch near Gardiner, Montana, and went directly to the Absaraka Mountains. When the special train reached Livingston there was plenty of bear meat ready for the royal table.

Hill led a party of hunters from Karat's Kold Spring Ranch near Bozeman, Montana, into the Gallatin Mountains, where they found elk in abundance. When the "Royal Rumanian" reached Bozeman, elk meat was placed on the tables of the distinguished visitors. Rainbow trout, from their native haunts in icy streams in the Mission Ranges of the Montana Rockies, were secured by W. W. Binko of Binko's Clearwater Ranch, Missoula, Montana.

Wild duck and geese were bagged in abundance in Minnesota by the Chippewa Indians, who also harvested wild rice from the marshes for inclusion on the royal menu, thus adding another food to the growing list of dishes never before tasted by the Queen.

The Joke When They Met

By RUTH ARNOLD

(Copyright.)

ELLEN BURKE, sitting in her chair of the pullman as the long train drew into the station at Philadelphia, tucked Peggy O'Connell's letter safely in her handbag. Ellen and Peggy had met on shipboard going to Europe a few months before with their respective parents, and had formed an enthusiastic friendship. This was helped along because Mr. and Mrs. Burke and Mr. and Mrs. O'Connell found each other congenial. On the way home—for the Burkes and O'Connells had purposely returned to America by the same ship—Peggy had exacted a promise from Ellen to visit her as soon as she had unpacked her trunks. Ellen lived in a New York apartment. Peggy lived in a country house outside Philadelphia. And the two girls planned many good times in exchanged visits.

"As soon as you reach Broad Street station," Peggy had written, "you telephone my brother, Bob." And then she had given his telephone number and his office address. "He'll be expecting you and will pick you up at the station and bring you out home."

Ellen had heard much from Peggy. In their many talks together that summer, about her brother, John. And it must be admitted that part of her excitement at again seeing Peggy was that she would meet this paragon of a brother who, according to his sister, was as good as he was handsome, as popular as he was charming.

Ellen knew something of Philadelphia. And when there was some delay in getting John's office telephone, she realized that she was only a few steps from his office.

"I'll just pop around and wait there," she thought. "It will save him trouble, and I'm early. I'd rather wait there than here."

So, carrying her small gray suitcase and matching hatbox, Peggy walked the square or two to John O'Connell's office. She hesitatingly opened the door labeled "John O'Connell, lawyer," opened and entered a small waiting room. The room was full—full of girls, girls about her own age, girls younger, and girls a good deal older.

"I'll just wait here until Mr. O'Connell is free," she said to an office boy, who grinned in answer. Ellen wore, of course, sheer, light silk stockings. She wore gray suede shoes, trimmed with bands of snake-skin. Her hat was of soft gray velvet, that was lovely above her fair hair and blue eyes. Her frock was of gray crepe de chine, not elaborate, but yet unmistakably expensive. She and Peggy had shopped for it together in Paris.

Just as she had taken in all her surroundings a door marked private opened, and a homely, thirty-year-old woman, dressed in blue serge, serviceable and plain, emerged.

Behind her came a young man. Ellen's heart skipped a beat. It was John—she knew from a photograph Peggy always carried with her. "You can all go, now," he said to the other waiting girls. "The position is filled."

The other girls went out of the room. Ellen flushed and half smiled at John.

"What are you waiting for?" he asked crisply. "Here, come in here a minute."

"But," stammered Ellen, "I'm—" She followed him into his office. "I know, I know. But the job is filled. And just for your own good, let me tell you that you'll never get the kind of job a nice girl like you wants if you dress in duds like those. Did you see that girl I hired? Plain and reliable. The kind of woman a man likes to have around all day. Not ugly, but just not noticeable, and sure to have her mind on something besides clothes. Now you—anybody'd know you were thinking more about your looks than your work—and that doesn't do in an office."

"Don't feel offended," said the young man. "I'm just trying to give you a bit of advice."

"But you're so stupid," said Ellen, as the door marked "Private" closed. And she picked up her two pretty little gray bags and walked back to the station. There she boarded the next local train to Peggy's home and explained to Peggy, when she got there, that she hadn't been able to get her brother on the telephone. So Peggy promptly telephoned her brother not to wait.

When Ellen and John met that evening, John's eyes were openly admiring. Ellen, in pink tulle, with bare arms and no hat, did not at first recall the vision of gray that had disturbed his office calm that afternoon.

It was not until the next day when she and Peggy had luncheon with him at a hotel that he recognized the woman who Ellen as his office visitor.

BRAINERD'S DAY OF JUBILEE

COMPLETION of the paved road from Belle Prairie to Brainerd was reason enough why that prim city should have a day of jollification for itself and its neighbors. Boons of that character are few and far between.

It wasn't a very good day for an outdoor celebration, including a parade, but it was just such a day as emphasized the value of a paved road, which is proof against anything but heavy snow as a "going concern," and may be made to suffer only a temporary handicap under that.

Rain or shine on the day of the jollification, a driver starting from Minneapolis could go all the way to Brainerd at a clip of 35 to 40 miles an hour, except through the incorporated settlements, and feel quite safe in the going. Give him a closed car, a heater and an automatic windshield wiper, and he would be as comfortable as if he were in his living room at home.

Now if that Cincinnati chap who wrote for a radio magazine a story saying that Brainerd was shy on religion, churches, musical culture and a few other things like that, he will discover how far wrong was his long-distance guess. Brainerd is decidedly not "an isolated little city of the north woods," and it wasn't that when the penny-a-liner delivered himself of his "boner" two years ago.

Brainerd has plenty of churches to go around, and plenty of hymn and anthem singers in them. It is headquarters of the Crow Wing County Garden Flower society, which means it has many lovers of the beautiful in nature. It has a crack-a-jack band composed of 35 young women who know how to make good music. It has three hospitals and a sizeable public library, and a Y. M. C. A., and paved streets, and a park.

A paved road that stretches out for several scores of miles may grow a bit monotonous at times, but when it taps a town, that town is not rightly to be called isolated from the rest of the world. Minneapolisans are mighty glad to have this better highway tie between itself and Brainerd. The two cities are more readily accessible as neighbors, and the pavement is worth relatively as much to one as to the other. By its celebration Brainerd helped to publish to the world that Minnesota is a state of good roads, and that the roads are getting better year by year.—Minneapolis Tribune.

SPEAKING OF CHRISTMAS

THE annual "Do Your Christmas Shopping Early" campaign is now on. This slogan contains some good and timely advice, and it is to be hoped that people will follow it. Early shopping makes early mailing possible, and the two together will benefit everyone concerned.

Christmas stocks in the stores are practically complete in every line and it is time to make up that Christmas list and begin looking around. It is not too early now to commence to think about one's Christmas purchases, planning out what one is going to give, and actually beginning to buy.

There is a great deal of satisfaction in giving a suitable and appropriate present to friend or relative. It is great fun to shop for the youngsters, to whom Christmas means so much.

But this pleasure is greatly enhanced by the satisfaction of early shopping, by knowing that gifts have been purchased from fresh, clean, unhandled stocks, and are ready to be wrapped up and that those that are going out of town will be delivered on time. There is no satisfaction to buyer or seller, and very little to recipient of gifts which are purchased in a mad, last-minute scramble.

Take the matter of Christmas cards, for instance. Thousands of those will be purchased during the next few weeks. Why not select Christmas cards now, while the stocks are complete and fresh and the counters are not crowded.

It will certainly bring a sigh of relief when the busy days just before Christmas come, to know that the cards are all addressed and stamped, ready to mail.

Do a good turn by the sales people and merchants who are now ready to serve you, by shopping early, and at the same time benefit yourself. Co-operate with the postoffice people who are now making preparations to handle the Christmas mail. Wrap and pack parcels securely, prepay the postage, and get your Christmas packages into mail early. This will help relieve the Christmas congestion of mail, aid the mail clerks and carriers, and insure your gifts being safely delivered on time.

The slogan, "Do Your Christmas Shopping Early," should not be an empty phrase. It is a plea that should be hearkened to, and a mandate that should be obeyed.—Duluth News Tribune.

AND STILL THE PUBLICITY ROLLS ALONG

GATHERING momentum like a snowball rolling down a mountainside until it gets the force of a snowslide, so publicity accorded the Brainerd Paving celebration accumulates force and momentum.

Among the finest editorials published we may mention those of the Minneapolis Tribune and the Minneapolis Journal. Both reveal close study of the cement paving and the benefits accruing from being a part of such a route, now 214 miles in length.

It also brings forcibly to mind the potent fact that cement paving means all the year around communication. The action of the State Highway Department in accumulating a large reserve of necessary machinery for snow removal, in adding to its battery of tractors, trucks, etc., and in establishing state department district headquarters such as maintained at Brainerd at strategic points, all indicates the department is alive to the situation and in earnest to afford constant communication on cement highways.

The Brainerd Paving Celebration has done much to bring to the attention of the state at large just what our competent State Highway Department is doing. It has even attracted the attention of states bordering Minnesota and of Canada, congratulatory telegrams being read from Kansas City, Mo.; Washington, D. C.; Winnipeg, Canada, etc.

Steps have been taken by the local publicity committee to invoke the aid of the radio and it is hoped that WCCO will put on a program, giving the Highway Department men who were at Brainerd a chance to tell of the paving celebration and what it means to Brainerd, to Minneapolis, and the state at large.

Pictorially, Pathe News Reel will spread the news to the world on the silver screen. Theodore L. Hayes, of Finkelstein & Ruben, always interested in the state of Minnesota, will give the Pathe News Reel wide distribution over their chain of theatres in several states. Other states, too, will be anxious to get the reel.

A follow up story will be sent to many newspapers, thus linking radio, news reel and local publicity in a comprehensive story.

FUR TRIMMED COATS

New York, Nov. 15.—(UP)—Fur-trimmed cloth coats have been very popular this Fall and it begins to look as though many women intend to wear them right through the winter since few fur coats have appeared to date. Dull-finished broadcloth is by far the smartest coat material although velours and other heavy fabrics are used to some extent. Black is the most popular broadcloth color. Lynx and light shades of fox are the most effective trimmings, adorning borders, pockets, sleeves and long collars.

Among the smattering of furedats which have been worn thus far are bronze, brown and black caracul, leopard, pony, sheared lamb, nutria, kid skin and calfskin. Most all of these are of semi-sports type with slender lines and with collars and cuffs of long-haired furs. There is a prevalence of brown furs.

Bronze caracul with collar and cuffs of brown fox is an example used repeatedly. Black caracul is quite popular. Black seal is almost a minus quantity. What seals are shown in the shops are trimmed with kolinsky, pointed fox, baum-marten, mink, beaver and occasionally krimmer.

Pony and leopard coats are popular youthful models. Leopard this year is being trimmed with beaver or red fox. Calf fur coats are conspicuous by their colors rather than their numbers. Brown and white spotted jersey and black and white Holstein effects are startling without being attractive. These models are of three quarter length sports type.

Krimmer is the newer gray fur used for coats as well as trimming. What squirrel coats one sees seem to be of last year's vintage. Moufflon, an inexpensive gray sheep fur is used on some of the youthful evening wraps. For instance, a silver cape in the junior Misses' department of a popular shop has a deep hemborder of this fur and a shawl collar which extends to the hem. Trimmings on fur coats match the garment or are of the light-hued variety. Yellowish shades of taupe are among the popular dyed shades.

DRINK WATER IF
KIDNEYS BOTHER

Take a Tablespoonful of Salts if Back Pains or Bladder is Irritated

Flush your kidneys by drinking a quart of water each day, also take salts occasionally, says a noted authority, who tells us that too much rich food forms acids which almost paralyze the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken; then you may suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sour, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To help neutralize these irritating acids; to help cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste, get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here. Take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink. —Adv.

Among the finest editorials published we may mention those of the Minneapolis Tribune and the Minneapolis Journal. Both reveal close study of the cement paving and the benefits accruing from being a part of such a route, now 214 miles in length.

It also brings forcibly to mind the potent fact that cement paving means all the year around communication. The action of the State Highway Department in accumulating a large reserve of necessary machinery for snow removal, in adding to its battery of tractors, trucks, etc., and in establishing state department district headquarters such as maintained at Brainerd at strategic points, all indicates the department is alive to the situation and in earnest to afford constant communication on cement highways.

The Brainerd Paving Celebration has done much to bring to the attention of the state at large just what our competent State Highway Department is doing. It has even attracted the attention of states bordering Minnesota and of Canada, congratulatory telegrams being read from Kansas City, Mo.; Washington, D. C.; Winnipeg, Canada, etc.

Steps have been taken by the local publicity committee to invoke the aid of the radio and it is hoped that WCCO will put on a program, giving the Highway Department men who were at Brainerd a chance to tell of the paving celebration and what it means to Brainerd, to Minneapolis, and the state at large.

Pictorially, Pathe News Reel, will spread the news to the world on the silver screen. Theodore L. Hayes, of Finkelstein & Ruben, always interested in the state of Minnesota, will give the Pathe News Reel wide distribution over their chain of theatres in several states. Other states, too, will be anxious to get the reel.

A follow up story will be sent to many newspapers, thus linking radio, news reel and local publicity in a comprehensive story.

Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Gemmell returned yesterday morning from Ottawa, Canada. Mrs. Gemmell had been there for some time visiting with Mr. Gemmell's people but Mr. Gemmell went there but recently to return with his wife.

Mrs. George D. LaBar entertained the members of the "Pinnacle club" last night at her home in a charming manner. After the game had been played for about two hours refreshments were served. The following were present: Mr. and Mrs. S. F. Alderman, Mr. and Mrs. E. O. Webb, Mr. and Mrs. E. O. Parks, Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Elder, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Farra, Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Mitchell, Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Wieland, W. E. Winslow, and Miss Mitchell.

Mrs. W. H. Rosenkranz and Mrs. Geo. Bock returned today from an extended visit at New Buffalo, Mich. They were accompanied home by their sister, who will visit with them for some time. The ladies had not met for over forty years.

Prof. Keppel has been busy for the past few days organizing for the basketball season in the high school of the city. Some good squads have been organized and about 15 young gentlemen and 20 young ladies will take an interest in the game this winter. Prof. Keppel will have charge of the teams and will drill them. The third story of the Columbian block has been secured and it is being fixed up for the purpose.

lar youthful models. Leopard this year is being trimmed with beaver or red fox. Calf fur coats are conspicuous by their colors rather than their numbers. Brown and white spotted jersey and black and white Holstein effects are startling without being attractive. These models are of three quarter length sports type.

Krimmer is the newer gray fur used for coats as well as trimming. What squirrel coats one sees seem to be of last year's vintage. Moufflon, an inexpensive gray sheep fur is used on some of the youthful evening wraps. For instance, a silver cape in the junior Misses' department of a popular shop has a deep hemborder of this fur and a shawl collar which extends to the hem. Trimmings on fur coats match the garment or are of the light-hued variety. Yellowish shades of taupe are among the popular dyed shades.

DRINK WATER IF
KIDNEYS BOTHER

Take a Tablespoonful of Salts if Back Pains or Bladder is Irritated

Flush your kidneys by drinking a quart of water each day, also take salts occasionally, says a noted authority, who tells us that too much rich food forms acids which almost paralyze the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken; then you may suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sour, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To help neutralize these irritating acids; to help cleanse the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste, get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here. Take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink. —Advt.

Don't Tell the Wife
BY WILLIAM B. COURTNEY
Copyright 1926 Warner Bros. Pictures, Inc.
"DON'T TELL THE WIFE," starring Irene Rich, is a Warner Bros. picturization of this novel.

The hot and stubborn tempers of Ranny Forbes, star polo player, and his beautiful wife, Joan, result in temperamental storms that furnish elite society with choice gossip. Before the start of the Westbury Cup final, in which Ranny is to play, he tells his chum, Clay Varick, that Joan wants a divorce; but when Clay congratulates him Ranny earnestly avows that he loves Joan. Worse, he brokenly confides his discovery that she is in love with another man, Abner Gratman. Joan, it seems, is not aware that he knows. Stivner, a lumber king with whom he has been negotiating a gigantic business deal, tells Ranny he has wagered fifty thousand on his team. Ranny sees that victory will mean business good will. And a world of additional meaning is lent the situation when Ranny learns that the wager is with—Abner Gratman!

CHAPTER I—Continued

"Yes, with Abner Gratman no less," went on the billionaire, a partially contemptuous and wholly disparaging twist to his strong mouth. "Imagine that, if your imagination is lively, Forbes!"

Ranny was tongue-tied, not so much from an unlively imagination as from a too lurid one! Clay made a verbal pinch hit for him, mockingly:

"We can't imagine it, Stivner. Now, if this game were to be id—"

"Oh, Gratman frankly admitted that it wasn't so much a sporting appreciation of polo that prompted him," broke in Stivner jovially, with an altogether innocent wink that Ranny was not supposed to miss, and did not, "but merely a desire to settle a point of evident discussion between himself and Mrs. Forbes, to flaunt his winnings in her face as proof of his contention that Forbes here is a rotten polo player!"

Livingstone Stivner meant his

"By the way, where is Gratman sitting?"

"There's his roadster back of the west goal—the pretty, pretty one in pale yellow. But—he just strolled over and joined Joan in your car."

Ranny's troubled eyes sought his sedan and witnessed testimony that grievously deepened the frowning wrinkle above his nose. Even at this distance he could see that Joan and Abner were chatting animatedly. He beheaded an imaginary Abner with his mallet.

"Clay," he promised, "you're going to see two things this afternoon. You're going to see me make that crumb lose fifty thousand, and you're going to see me drive a polo ball smack through his snivelly little face!"

Now Ranny had spurred away from Clay and joined his mates, dissembling with a bit of cheery bombast that provoked grins and banter from both sides. Now the eight eager horsemen and eight even more eager ponies were facing in a milling group that broke into irregularity as Clay, rising in his stirrups, threw the ball impartially into their midst, and the eager chafed mallets of the captains reached and clashed and locked in the nervous bid for possession. And now the glistening white spheroid had shot clear of the tangle of pony legs and mallet shafts, and the opposing forwards were off in a mad chase of it.

Given an early autumnal day of the rare, crisp balminess that can be known only on the beautiful leas of Long Island's north side, plus the rich turnout of gowns and equipages and color and flavor of America's wealthiest and smartest society, and there can be no more entrancing kaleidoscope of dash and beauty in all the world than this modern rendition of the game that had its birth in ancient Persia. The regal game that went successively to Turkestan, to Tibet, to Japan, to olden China, while the jolly all in good part. He could hardly be expected to know that each of his words fell like axe strokes on the raw of Ranny's heart.

Ranny huskily took advantage of a chance to excuse himself. "Here's my groom."

A "horsey" little bantam of a Cockney was bringing up two ponies. Ranny, who had driven out in his togs ready to mount and play, strode to meet him.

"Judy's in the finest fettle—" the groom started to say briskly, but suddenly switched: "Why, sir, wot's the matter? You're all white and nasy!"

"Nothing—nothing. What was it you were saying?" Ranny nervously threw one of his mallets aside and hefted the swish of the one with which he had elected to open play.

"Well, sir, I was saying as 'ow Judy's warmed up quickest. You'll myke no mistyke to tyke her first, sir."

Such was Ranny's implicit faith in the canniness of the weazened groom that he accepted the advice without comment and vaulted, in a preoccupied, mechanical way, upon the back of the sleek little Irish bred mare. The Argentines, in their saffron shirts and black helmets, and Ranny's teammates, in their red and blue striped jerseys, were loping toward midfield—a pretty picture on their handsome mounts against the emerald field, with its papier-mache goal posts and its thready white board outline. Clay, who had mounted a big horse, dignified and midnight black, was leading after them, a shiny new willow root ball in his hand, extra ones in each side pocket of his Norfolk jacket.

Pull around the field automobiles were jammed hub to hub. Many hundred thousand dollars were represented in that secondary border of steel and glass. Some of the spectators remained seated in their motors to onlook, but the keener ones tightened around the freshly whitewashed foot high plankings. A surge of expectancy waded through the bobbing humans in the grandstand.

Ranny immediately broke Judy into a mad gallop and overtook Clay. "Well, you heard THAT?"

"Uh huh!" grimly.

Who owns, and in the end who controls the Standard Oil Company (Indiana)?

The ownership is vested in between 50 and 60 thousand individuals and organizations, no one of whom owns as much as 5 1/4% of the Capital Stock. Nearly eighteen thousand of these stock owners, also are employees, doing the homely, everyday duties which have been assigned to them.

The Standard Oil Company (Indiana) is a company of men and women who work. The men holding the most important positions in the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) are qualified for them by an extraordinary capacity for work.

Family or money or "pull" have no place in the scheme of promotion in the Standard Oil Company (Indiana). There are no "promotion plums" in the way of "soft" jobs to be handed out. There is no place in the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) for laziness or incompetence.

The Board of Directors of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) is an executive body which, to a man, knows its affairs intimately through day-to-day working contact with them.

All of the Directors are company employees. Most of them started well down the ladder. They came up from the ranks doing the common job so uncommonly well that nothing could stop their advancement.

Eighteen thousand of the 50,000 "capitalists" behind the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) are employed stockholders who have so definite an interest in the advancement and efficiency of the Company as to constitute an army of enthusiasts, wise, thrifty, industrious; rich in their capacity for living life to the full, knowing the satisfaction of work and the pleasure of play, realizing the thrill of providing for those they love by careful saving and investing.

They constitute a loyal ambitious group who have seized the opportunity offered by the company of becoming partners in the business. The Employees' Stock Purchasing Plans have been to them an incentive to save and an inspiration to work.

They have shown their appreciation of the company's interest in them by an enthusiasm and efficiency that helps to build enduring progress.

The purpose of the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) to serve the thirty million people of the Middle West is a large purpose with large demands.

It requires capitalists in overalls—every man in the entire organization working—every man doing his job to the very best of his ability.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Store Omits Future "Sales"

Another large, successful department store—this time at Pittsburgh, Pa.—has announced that in the future it will operate on the no-sale plan—a plan, by the way, that has made the J. C. Penney Company a household word throughout the United States.

That thrifty buyer—the American woman—recognizes in the no-sale plan of store operation a policy that safeguards her every purchase because it assures as much for her dollar today while she is buying as tomorrow or any time in the future.

Our Store—any store that does not hold sales—must always give the fullest measure of Service as represented by High Quality at Low Price, in order to maintain the Confidence of the public. It is our idea that we can better serve the public by serving it as nearly alike every day as is possible.

We congratulate our fellow merchant at Pittsburgh upon adopting this high policy of service.

Cobbler a Philanthropist

John Pounds is a name familiar to most Englishmen, but meaning little if anything to the average American. He won fame as a philanthropist by his self-denying acts in rescuing and training the poor youths and waifs of Portsmouth, though he depended on his occupation as cobbler for his own support.

"Nimble-Lofty"

Long poetry some cannot be friends with; and indeed, it falls upon the reading. The wittiest poets have been all short and changing soon their subject, as Horace, Martial, Juvenal, Seneca and the two comedians. Poetry should be rather like a Coranto, short and nimble-lofty, than a dull lesson of a day long—Owen Feltham, in "Resolves," 1620.

Minneapolis, Nov. 15. — (UP) — The University of Minnesota football team will be at the peak of its form for the all important game with the University of Michigan Saturday.

By overwhelming Butler College of Indianapolis 81 to 0 Saturday, the galloping Gophers sounded advance warning that one of the greatest Minnesota teams is ready to take the field against Coach "Hurricane" Yost's Wolverines.

While the Michigan and Minnesota teams battle, Northwestern will be meeting Iowa. The Purple is just about certain to lick the weak Hawkeyes and finish its season without a defeat on its record.

This means that Michigan will have to win to tie for the championship and it is a dead cinch that Benny Friedman, Benny Oosterbaan, "Bo" Molenda and the rest of Yost's stars will have to cut loose with all they've got to turn in a victory.

Dr. Harry L. Williams, former Minnesota coach and now a special writer for The Minneapolis Journal, advances his conservative opinion that the Gophers are of championship calibre and is optimistic about the Michigan game.

Dr. Clarence W. Spears will devote this week to keeping his men at the top of their form, physically and mentally, drilling them on new plays which were explained last week, perfecting the defense against Michigan's passes and having the men on the alert against the Wolverine tricks.

Depicts Desert Tragedy

A grim little memento of a tragedy of the desert has been given to the University of Pennsylvania by Prof. John W. Harsberger of the botany department. It consists of the dried and mummified body of a horned toad, entangled among the curved spines of a small cactus. The skin of the luckless little animal was not punctured in any place, but its hind legs were fettered by the fish-hook-shaped thorns, and it had apparently died a slow death of hunger and thirst. The cactus appears to be much tougher than its animal victim, for though it had been torn from its roots for several weeks it showed no signs of distress, and Professor Harsberger stated that such plants are able to live without a drop of water for several years, lying on a laboratory shelf.

Then he is courteously asked never to darken the door of the establishment again. — New York World.

It just costs 75 guineas a year to keep that picture on thy wall." "I have never looked at it in that light," confessed Turner; "but I have only a life interest in it."

New York, Nov. 15. — (UP) — These chilly Monday mornings, with winter just around the corner, are getting to be just mornings to grumble out into a cold room and get some satisfaction out of the thought: "Well, I'm not as bad off as Yale and Harvard."

It used to be news when Harvard and Yale were beaten on the same day, but those days are gone and in this hectic season more attention is devoted to the narration of a story that could detail a Yale or a Harvard victory.

Another knockdown and drag out week-end of football—only two definite championships were decided. Princeton clinched the championship of the one time "Big Three" and Southern Methodist clinched first position in the southwestern conference.

The day's results, while not official, also helped to establish the Notre Dame and Navy teams as the greatest of the season.

Notre Dame, plodding through a schedule that only the bravest would attempt, lived up to every hope that had been entrusted to that master, Knute Rockne, by beating one of the greatest teams that ever represented the United States military academy.

While the Army was going down to its first defeat of the season, a defeat that spoiled its ambition for a national championship, the Navy squeezed through a victory over a great Georgetown team.

The Navy stands out today as the first team in the east. Brown, Lafayette, New York University and Boston College have not been defeated yet but none of those teams have gone through the schedule that the Navy has passed through.

Notre Dame for the same strong schedule reason, is the ranking team of the middle west and a team that is charging rapidly and convincingly toward one of the first national championships that ever has been established without qualification or doubt.

Michigan's victory over Ohio State narrow as it was, pushed Ohio State down the list in the western conference.

Michigan and Northwestern are now tied for the Big Ten lead.

Alabama still leads the race in the southern conference and Stanford seems to be the winning team on the Pacific coast.

By CLARK B. KELSEY
(United Press Staff Correspondent)
Chicago, Nov. 15. — The Big Ten conference championship for 1926 today rested between two teams, Michigan and Northwestern, as practice began for the final games of the season next Saturday.

Of the two remaining aggregations, Northwestern seems to be the favorite to win. The Purple meets a comparatively weak team in Iowa Saturday while the Wolverines must face what is regarded as one of the strongest outfits in the midwest at present, Minnesota.

Northwestern has the strongest team it has held in years and is regarded by experts as the real cream of the conference. The 38 to 7 victory over Chicago last Saturday was but an indication of the great strength of the team because only straight football was used.

That Michigan is much weaker than last year is borne out by the team's slim margin of victory over Ohio State when the Wolverines won 17 to 16.

Minnesota has already been beaten by Michigan, but since then the Gophers have gotten their regular strength on the field and at game

MANY TITLE-HOLDERS DETHRONED IN 1926

By HENRY L. FARRELL
(United Press Sports Editor)
New York, Nov. 15. — Nearing the end of a topsy-turvy year of sport that has made a complete mess of big names and big records, boxing finds among title-holders who were not reigning last year:

Gene Tunney, world's heavyweight champion;
Jack Delaney, world's light heavyweight champion;
Tiger Flowers, world's middleweight champion;
Pete Latzo, world's welterweight champion;
Sammy Mandell, world's lightweight champion.
There is no recognized featherweight champion.

Five new world's champions and the passing of Jack Dempsey, Harry Wills, Paul Berlenbach, Mickey Walker and Johnny Dundee and the death of Harry Greb is as violent a turnover as boxing form ever has witnessed in a period of less than twelve months.

Last December it seemed safe to bet that Dempsey, Berlenbach, Greb, Walker and Kaplan would reign for at least one year. The other classes seemed destined for several changes and they came.

Dempsey paid the penalty for remaining out of the ring too long. Berlenbach was the victim of weight making. Greb suffered the final effects of careless living. Walker succumbed to the price of playing the bright lights and Kid Kaplan had to give up because he outgrew the featherweight class.

There is little chance for more changes before the year ends because time is too short and the necessary bouts are not in the making.

Tunney will not fight until late next summer. Delaney is too good a card for an indoor show. Flowers may risk his title against Mickey Walker but Walker will be no better as a middleweight than he turned out to be as a welterweight for the same reason. Latzo was not recovered from a painful injury to his right arm.

The new year probably will find a new champion within the first seven days, however. Tex Rickard has matched Charley Rosenberg, defending champion, to meet Bushey Graham in his Garden on Jan. 7 and Graham on form certainly ought to win.

Rosenberg probably was the most disappointing champion the bantamweight class ever recognized as a leader. He was barred by the New York and Illinois boxing commissions for not defending his title and he didn't make one satisfactory fight as a champion.

Following the old tradition that a champion only can lose a crown by being knocked out from under it, Graham will have the support of the old timers if he defeats Rosenberg but the younger element of fandom will not accept Graham until he proves that he is a better fighter than Buf Taylor and there is only one way to prove it.

When the Illinois boxing commission barred Rosenberg for life, it passed the mantle on to Taylor and if any boxing commission has the power to legislate a champion into a crown, Taylor is the champion now.

Taylor is generally accepted as the champion and his only misfortune is that as an official champion he cannot command the purses that are the reward of an officially recognized champion. In the long run, however, Taylor may be making more money than he would have made as a real champion and certainly he does not have to suffer the penalty of annoyance that is the endowment of a modern champion.

The featherweight division, with champions stepping in and jumping out because they cannot make weight has developed into such a problem that even the New York commission, with its international reputation for leaping and then looking washed its hands of the middle and passed the buck.

The Massachusetts commission accepted the buck and announced that it would recognize the winner of a contest between Chick Suggs and Honeyboy Finnegan, two New England products, as the champion.

And that's fair enough as either one of them could lick any one of the other contenders who disputed their right to the title.

PLAN TO CLOSE COMPETITION OF NON-CITIZENS

STANDARDIZING JUMPING RULES
ALSO TO COME BEFORE

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 15. — (UP) — A plan to close American athletic competition to non-citizens of this country, a proposal that would debar Willie Ritola, distance running star, comes before the Amateur Athletic Union convention here today. Bill Kennedy, veteran marathon runner, president of the Connecticut A. A. U. and of the American Marathon Runners' Association, declared his intention to fight for adoption of the plan. A bricklayer by trade, Kennedy said his own union compels foreigners to be naturalized if they expect to enjoy union privileges.

Standardizing jumping rules and eliminating the 50-yard swim from men's and women's indoor championships, also will come before the delegates.

time Saturday, it is expected that even money will prevail.

The Gophers ran up 81 points against Butler Saturday and that is an achievement.

In the other games of Saturday where Big Ten teams were concerned, the Indiana victory over Mississippi A. & M. stands out. Illinois had just a second team scrimmage from Wabash and Purdue had Franklin beaten from the start.

The Iowa-Wisconsin game went about as was expected when the Badgers won 20 to 10.

Hopes of a national championship for Notre Dame have risen considerably with the Irish victory over the Army Saturday.

Jack Delaney, world's light heavyweight champion;
Tiger Flowers, world's middleweight champion;
Pete Latzo, world's welterweight champion;
Sammy Mandell, world's lightweight champion.
There is no recognized featherweight champion.

Five new world's champions and the passing of Jack Dempsey, Harry Wills, Paul Berlenbach, Mickey Walker and Johnny Dundee and the death of Harry Greb is as violent a turnover as boxing form ever has witnessed in a period of less than twelve months.

Last December it seemed safe to bet that Dempsey, Berlenbach, Greb, Walker and Kaplan would reign for at least one year. The other classes seemed destined for several changes and they came.

Dempsey paid the penalty for remaining out of the ring too long. Ber-lenbach was the victim of weight making. Greb suffered the final effects of careless living. Walker succumbed to the price of playing the bright lights and Kid Kaplan had to give up because he outgrew the featherweight class.

There is little chance for more changes before the year ends because time is too short and the necessary bouts are not in the making.
Tunney will not fight until late next summer. Delaney is too good a card for an indoor show. Flowers may risk his title against Mickey Walker but Walker will be no better as a middleweight than he turned out to be as a welterweight for the same reason. Latzo has not recovered from a painful injury to his right arm.

The new year probably will find a new champion within the first seven days, however. Tex Rickard has matched Charley Rosenberg, defending champion, to meet Bushey Graham in his Garden on Jan. 7 and Graham on form certainly ought to win.

Rosenberg probably was the most disappointing champion the bantamweight class ever recognized as a leader. He was barred by the New York and Illinois boxing commissions for not defending his title and he didn't make one satisfactory fight as a champion.

Following the old tradition that a champion only can lose a crown by being knocked out from under it, Graham will have the support of the old timers if he defeats Rosenberg but the younger element of fandom will not accept Graham until he proves that he is a better fighter than Buf Taylor and there is only one way to prove it.

When the Illinois boxing commission barred Rosenberg for life, it passed the mantle on to Taylor and if any boxing commission has the power to legislate a champion into a crown, Taylor is the champion now.

Taylor is generally accepted as the champion and his only misfortune is that as an official champion he cannot command the purses that are the reward of an officially recognized champion. In the long run, however, Taylor may be making more money than he would have made as a real champion and certainly he does not have to suffer the penalty of annoyance that is the endowment of a modern champion.

The featherweight division, with champions stepping in and jumping out because they cannot make weight has developed into such a problem that even the New York commission, with its international reputation for leaping and then looking washed its hands of the muddle and passed the buck.

The Massachusetts commission accepted the buck and announced that it would recognize the winner of a contest between Chick Suggs and Honeyboy Finnegan, two New England products, as the champion.

And that's fair enough as either one of them could lick any one of the other contenders who disputed their right to the title.

PLAN TO CLOSE COMPETITION OF NON-CITIZENS

STANDARDIZING JUMPING RULES

Baltimore, Md., Nov. 15. — (UP) — A plan to close American athletic competition to non-citizens of this country, a proposal that would debar Willie Ritola, distance running star, comes before the Amateur Athletic Union convention here today.

Bill Kennedy, veteran marathon runner, president of the Connecticut
A. A. U. and of the American Marathon Runners' Association, declared his intention to fight for adoption of the plan. A bricklayer by trade,
Kennedy said his own union compels foreigners to be naturalized if they expect to enjoy union privileges.

Standardizing jumping rules and eliminating the 50-yard swim from men's and women's indoor championships, also will come before the delegates.

time Saturday, it is expected that even money will prevail.

The Gophers ran up 81 points against Butler Saturday and that is an achievement.

In the other games of Saturday where Big Ten teams were concerned, the Indiana victory over Mississippi A. & M. stands out. Illinois had just a second team scrimmage from Wabash and Purdue had Franklin beaten from the start.

The Iowa-Wisconsin game went about as was expected when the Badgers won 20 to 10.

Hopes of a national championship for Notre Dame have risen considerably with the Irish victory over the Army Saturday.

STRESSES IMPORTANCE OF TOURIST TRADE

Governor Theodore Christianson Delivers Splendid Address at Celebration

URGES ENCOURAGEMENT

Discusses State Highway Expenditures and Resources of Northwest

Governor Theodore Christianson speaking to the large gathering of people at the Brainerd Paving Celebration program Saturday afternoon in the new $25,000 State Highway Department building on West Laurel street urged that all things possible be done to sustain and encourage the tourist trade in Minnesota, which was a matter of supreme importance to the people of the State in as much that it represented millions of dollars spent here each year by hundreds of thousands of tourists.

"The lakes, scenery, and climate of Minnesota is a matter of great commercial importance. Good roads which the State are building and maintaining are establishing for the state a name on the honor roll throughout the United States, are the means by which the tourists and people of the State can enjoy these facilities," said Governor Theodore Christianson.

The governor extended to the people of Brainerd and those visiting taking part in the celebration felicitations of the state in this great achievement. He referred to the good work done by pioneers of roads, George W. Cooley and Robert Dunn and of the present valuable service being done by C. M. Babcock, commissioner of highways for the State of Minnesota.

"Mr. Babcock is not only a man you should be proud of, but he is a man you should be thankful for. He is a man of great responsibility, great vision and executive capacity and above all a man of stern honesty with whom the money of the state to be expended on the improvement and building of highways is yearly entrusted to him to handle," said the governor.

"Each year $17,000,000 is expended in the care, construction, of State Highways. Ten million dollars each year are raised on taxes on motor vehicles, five million dollars on the gas tax and two million dollars on the one mill tax. The State has a 7,000 mile system of roads, equal to any in the country. This year the State received in addition two and one quarter million dollars and money for roads from the Federal Government.

"The State is proud of its highway system and rightly they should be for the highways are being paid for as they are built. We should boost our state and our lakes. We should not tell any untruthful stories about it. We have a motto, 10,000 lakes. This really is not the truth as we have 11,000 lakes, and Crow Wing county has more than its share of lakes but the people of the state do not begrudge you this as we all share with you in your returns.

"The streams and lakes are replete with fish and we intend to keep them this way by maintaining a better game warden service and building fish hatcheries.

"The building of new roads in the north has its social significance with the people from the south of the States beyond in that travel is made more easy.

"Agriculture represents one of the greatest resources of the state. It at present ranks among the leading states in the country and has a larger productive land than any other state in the union. More than 110 million pounds of butter were produced last year and dairying each year is passing farther north into your county and others in the north. Crow Wing county has made very big progress along this line.

"Iron ore is another great production of the state of Minnesota. Last year 38,000,000 tons of ore were taken out of mines in Minnesota and this year more than 40 million tons will be taken from the mines, representing in value over 100 million dollars. It is estimated that there are one billion, three hundred million tons of iron ore remaining. When this supply is exhausted Minnesota has over 30 billion tons of low grade ore which can be utilized if the ore can be treated.

"By working together, playing together and uniting for the glory of the commonwealth, we can make palaces rise from the ground," concluded Governor Christianson.

Captain Fawcett's Talk
Captain William H. Fawcett, of Breezy Point lodge spoke as follows: "From the grave of Chief Peguot at Breezy Point Lodge, I come to greet our visitors. Chief Peguot's body has been mouldering in the ground for more than 50 years and my one regret today is that he is not here in the flesh to witness the achievement of our state highway department. When the Chief was on this earth, he rode his pony through rude trails that have been replaced by the concrete of 20th century engineers.

"Somehow, I feel that it is peculiarly fitting I should have a place on this program because I am the first contributor to that beautiful ribbon of pavement that links up Brainerd and the southern part of Minnesota. Last week, my wife managed to get herself arrested for speeding somewhere near Sauk Rapids. Her burst of speed cost the Fawcett exchequer $14.40. For her gesture toward the accelerator, I had the honor of assisting Mr. Babcock in the work of construction.

"Six years ago, I decided to cast my fortunes with Crow Wing county and the lake region of Minnesota. During the summers of 1921 and 1922 I travelled by airplane from Minneapolis to Breezy Point for the very good reason that the roads were not always passable. In 1921, the concrete extended as far north as Elk River. That year, Breezy Point lodge consisted of four small buildings. Today our summer resort represents an investment of over half a million dollars and 75 buildings are necessary to care for the guests. More than 15,000 persons visited with us last year and 98 per cent came by motor. This growth was made possible only because of the excellent annual progress of the good roads movement in the state.

"Since the dawn of history, highways have always gone hand in hand with civilization. The roads that Julius Caesar built continue to carry much of Europe's traffic. Along the Arabian way, the Roman legions returned from foreign conquests with their slaves, their plunder and their triumphs. Today those same roads carry the modern motor car and the other vehicles of peace and progress.

"We are here today to dedicate a lasting memorial to the foresight of our people and to the greater development of the North Star state. We hope that it will serve as a perpetual link to bind closer and closer the people of this section and our neighbors to the south.

"On behalf of Breezy Point Lodge I wish to extend heartfelt thanks to the State Highway Commission and its able officials for the completion of this highway of progress and prosperity into the portals of Brainerd and the great lake region of Northern Minnesota.

County Attorney Walter F. Wieland offered Crow Wing county's official gratitude to the highway department for their new pavement.

"Anything that will promote rapid transportation of persons and commodities brings better understanding and better trade relations," he said, "of the 99 miles of trunk highway in our county, most are improved. Our 15,000 people, grateful to the highway department, pledge our aid to its program."

"We should at this time," said County Attorney Wieland "pause for a moment in consideration of the lead. Detour 27 is dead as you will witness by this battered, yellow and black sign, draped with black and marked 'Detour 27.'"

R. R. Gould, who acted as chairman, spoke as follows:

"Many years ago enterprising citizens of our growing state thought of a great Highway System for Minnesota.

"After weeks, months, and years the Babcock Plan was conceived, and after an extensive campaign of education was enacted into law.

"For years our forward looking citizens, many of whom are with us today witnessing this partial fruition of their dream, some of whom have moved away, and some of whom are dear memories only, looked forward to this day and labored for its success.

"Here, in the midst of Minnesota's Ten Thousand Lakes, we meet today to celebrate.

"I shall not attempt to discuss this important matter except to say that it marks an epoch in the history of our city, county, and section of the state.

"The Highway speaks for itself.

W. C. COBB,
Superintendent of Schools.
W. A. M. JOHNSTONE,
Clerk of District Court.

"This assembly testifies to its importance.

"Further details will be developed as the program progresses.

"It is fitting that this discourse should be welcomed to Brainerd, and the welcome from the North will now be voiced by Hon. Frank E. Little, Mayor of Brainerd."

It's all over but for years will tingle the remembrances of Brainerd's greatest day, the greatest public showing the city has ever displayed, productive of good fellowship of the entire country, a day in which the whole state rejoiced with Brainerd and assisted in making it a huge success—Brainerd's paving celebration held here as the whole country knows on Saturday afternoon.

In spite of the fact that the day was somewhat misty, nothing could put a damper on the city's celebration. The parade was carried off with a pep, demonstrative of the people's feeling that Brainerd is now linked with the Twin Cities and Watonoma in the southern part of the State in one stretch of paving, the longest paving in the state which is now the aim of the people of the United States to extend in one long stretch of paving to Dallas, Texas. The State has had many achievement celebrations but officials who attended Brainerd's paving celebration Friday one and all endorsed the celebration as the greatest the State has seen. Last week the completion of the Mendota bridge, another of the State's grand achievements, was celebrated but many who witnessed this celebration stated that it was not even as great as Brainerd's paving celebration.

Governor Theodore Christianson extended the State felicitations to Brainerd in their great event, and in the governor's splendid address there carried the sincerity of the hearts of every man, woman, and child of Minnesota. The Governor termed the highway, a highway of hospitality, and rightly it is for the highway opens a door of hospitality to the 10,000 lakes country for hundreds of thousands of tourists each year who leave millions of dollars in the state. He discussed the splendid state highway department machine of efficiency, their system of paving for roads as they are built and of their aim of creating a system of hard surface roads incomparable in the United States.

The parade was one of the grandest demonstrations of the people's personal consideration that could have been possible to have been put on. Undoubtedly it would have been an even greater event had the weather been more favorable.

William J. Curcotte, chairman of the parade committee who was assisted ably in his office of marshal of the parade by W. J. Lyons and J. A. Peterson today extends thanks to the Crosby band, Little Falls band, the Brainerd Municipal band, the Brainerd Ladies band, the Brainerd Boys band and all others who took part in the parade and assisted in making it such a success, the state highway department for the use of their new building.

A dance, in the highway building in the evening concluded the day's festivities.

We should not tell any untruthful stories about it. We have a motto, 10,000 lakes. This really is not the truth as we have 11,000 lakes, and Crow Wing county has more than its share of lakes but the people of the state do not begrudge you this as we all share with you in your returns.

"The streams and lakes are replete with fish and we intend to keep them this way by maintaining a better game warden service and building fish hatcheries.

"The building of new roads in the north has its social significance with the people from the south of the States beyond in that travel is made more easy.

"Agriculture represents one of the greatest resources of the state. It at present ranks among the leading states in the country and has a larger productive land than any other state in the union. More than 110 million pounds of butter were produced last year and dairying each year is passing farther north into your country and others in the north. Crow Wing county has made very big progress along this line.

"Iron ore is another great production of the state of Minnesota. Last year 38,000,000 tons of ore were taken out of mines in Minnesota and this year more than 40 million tons will be taken from the mines, representing in value over 100 million dollars. It is estimated that there are one billion, three hundred million tons of iron ore remaining. When this supply is exhausted Minnesota has over 30 billion tons of low grade ore which can be utilized if the ore can be treated.

"By working together, playing together and uniting for the glory of the commonwealth, we can make palaces rise from the ground," concluded Governor Christianson.

Captain Fawcett's Talk
Captain William H. Fawcett, of Breezy Point lodge spoke as follows: "From the grave of Chief Pequot at Breezy Point Lodge, I come to greet our visitors. Chief Pequot's body has been mouldering in the ground for more than 50 years and my one regret today is that he is not here in the flesh to witness the achievement of our state highway department. When the Chief was on this earth, he rode his pony through rude trails that have been replaced by the concrete of 20th century engineers.

"Somehow, I feel that it is peculiarly fitting I should have a place on this program because I am the first contributor to that beautiful ribbon of pavement that links up Brainerd and the southern part of Minnesota. Last week, my wife managed to get herself arrested for speeding somewhere near Sauk Rapids. Her burst of speed cost the Fawcett exchequer $14.40. For her gesture toward the accelerator, I had the honor of assisting Mr. Babcock in the work of construction.

"Six years ago, I decided to cast my fortunes with Crow Wing county and the lake region of Minnesota. During the summers of 1921 and 1922 I travelled by airplane from Minneapolis to Breezy Point for the very good reason that the roads were not always passable. In 1921, the concrete extended as far north as Elk River. That year, Breezy Point lodge consisted of four small buildings. Today our summer resort represents an investment of over half a million dollars and 75 buildings are necessary to care for the guests. More than 15,000 persons visited with us last year and 98 per cent came by motor. This growth was made possible only because of the excellent annual progress of the good roads movement in the state.

"Since the dawn of history, highways have always gone hand in hand with civilization. The roads that Julius Caesar built continue to carry much of Europe's traffic. Along the Appian way, the Roman legions returned from foreign conquests with their slaves, their plunder and their triumphs. Today those same roads carry the modern motor car and the other vehicles of peace and progress.

"We are here today to dedicate a lasting memorial to the foresight of our people and to the greater development of the North Star state. We hope that it will serve as a perpetual link to bind closer and closer the people of this section and our neighbors to the south.

"On behalf of Breezy Point Lodge I wish to extend heartfelt thanks to the State Highway Commission and its able officials for the completion of this highway of progress and prosperity into the portals of Brainerd and the great lake region of Northern Minnesota.

County Attorney Walter F. Wieland offered Crow Wing county's official gratitude to the highway department for their new pavement.

"Anything that will promote rapid transportation of persons and commodities brings better understanding and better trade relations," he said, "of the 99 miles of trunk highway in our county, most are improved. Our 15,000 people, grateful to the highway department, pledge our aid to its program."

"We should at this time," said County Attorney Wieland "pause for a moment in consideration of the lead. Detour 27 is dead as you will witness by this battered, yellow and black sign, draped with black and marked 'Detour 27.'"

R. R. Gould, who acted as chairman, spoke as follows:

"Many years ago enterprising citizens of our growing state thought of a great Highway System for Minnesota.

"After weeks, months, and years the Babcock Plan was conceived, and after an extensive campaign of education was enacted into law.

"For years our forward looking citizens, many of whom are with us today witnessing this partial fruition of their dream, some of whom have moved away, and some of whom are dear memories only, looked forward to this day and labored for its success.

"Here, in the midst of Minnesota's Ten Thousand Lakes, we meet today to celebrate.

"I shall not attempt to discuss this important matter except to say that it marks an epoch in the history of our city, county, and section of the state.

"The Highway speaks for itself.

TO THOSE DESIRING TO PREPARE THEMSELVES FOR FINAL CITIZENSHIP OR SEEKING FURTHER KNOWLEDGE IN BETTER CITIZENSHIP.

For the purpose of assisting and preparing foreigners, desiring to be admitted to citizenship, in the necessary requirements therefor, you are advised that a meeting has been called for this purpose, for Wednesday evening, November 17, 1926, at 7:30 o'clock, in the South class room on the first floor of the High School, at which time arrangements will be made for opening and conducting night classes. All foreigners desirous of entering such a class, whether citizens or not, are requested to meet at the High School at the time and place stated.

W. C. COBB,
Superintendent of Schools.
W. A. M. JOHNSTONE,
Clerk of District Court.

"This assembly testifies to its importance.

"Further details will be developed as the program progresses.

"It is fitting that this concourse should be welcomed to Brainerd, and the welcome from the North will now be voiced by Hon. Frank E. Little, Mayor of Brainerd."

It's all over but for years will tingle the remembrances of Brainerd's greatest day, the greatest public showing the city has ever displayed, productive of good fellowship of the entire country, a day in which the whole state rejoiced with Brainerd and assisted in making it a huge success—Brainerd's paving celebration held here as the whole country knows on Saturday afternoon.

In spite of the fact that the day was somewhat misty, nothing could put a damper on the city's celebration. The parade was carried off with a pep, demonstrative of the people's feeling that Brainerd is now linked with the Twin Cities and Owatonna in the southern part of the State in one stretch of paving, the longest paving in the state which is now the aim of the people of the United States to extend in one long stretch of paving to Dallas, Texas. The State has had many achievement celebrations but officials who attended Brainerd's paving celebration felt that one and all endorsed the celebration as the greatest the State has seen. Last week the completion of the Mendota bridge, another of the State's grand achievements, was celebrated but many who witnessed this celebration stated that it was not even as great as Brainerd's paving celebration.

Governor Theodore Christianson extended the State felicitations to Brainerd in their great event, and in the governor's splendid address there carried the sincerity of the hearts of every man, woman, and child of Minnesota. The Governor termed the highway, a highway of hospitality, and rightly it is for the highway opens a door of hospitality to the 10,000 lakes country for hundreds of thousands of tourists each year who leave millions of dollars in the state. He discussed the splendid state highway department machine of efficiency, their system of paying for roads as they are built and of their aim of creating a system of hard surface roads incomparable in the United States.

The parade was one of the grandest demonstrations of the people's personal consideration that could have been possible to have been put on. Undoubtedly it would have been an even greater event had the weather been more favorable.

William J. Turcotte, chairman of the parade committee who was assisted ably in his office of marshal of the parade by W. J. Lyons and J. A. Peterson today extends thanks to the Crosby band, Little Falls band, the Brainerd Municipal band, the Brainerd Ladies band, the Brainerd Boys band and all others who took part in the parade and assisted in making it such a success, the state highway department for the use of their new building.

A dance in the highway building in the evening concluded the day's festivities.

Play and Long Life Are Closely Allied

Since the life insurance business, one of the most prosperous and consistent in the country, is founded on the premise that the company knows just how long you ought to live, we have every reason to believe that the mortality tables, or whatever the technical name may be, are accurate.

In spite of the fast pace and the exacting requirements of modern business, fewer and fewer men are growing old before their time. And the principal reason for this is that they are learning to play.

It wasn't so very long ago that play was considered something that should be put away with childish things about the time the youth donned long trousers.

Happily, the modern man of every age is able to appreciate the benefits of a regular play program in his life. As a result, he is working better and carrying his virility to a greater age.—Fond du Lac News.

Resourceful Writer

There was once an artist who was illustrating a novel. "It's a pity it's a love story," he said to the author, "because the only thing I can draw really well is a charging rhinoceros."

"That's easy," replied the author, and turning to the passage where "he quailed before her proud glance," he inserted a few words and handed the manuscript to the artist, who read: "He, who had often faced a charging rhinoceros unmoved, now quailed."

And so the picture appeared, with the words: "He" faced a charging rhinoceros.—Open Road.

"Skinner" Makes Them Howl With Mirth at Lyceum

Reginald Denny has earned the right to be crowned King of Comedy. This amazing young actor conveys more with the lift of an inquiring eyebrow than many others can with their entire bodies.

Denny's flair for farce is not better exemplified than in his latest starring vehicle, "Skinner's Dress Suit," now playing to hilarious audiences at the Lyceum theatre.

"Skinner's Dress Suit" is a rib-tickling tale of a young married couple, the Skinners, who live in the suburbs. They are just the sort of married children who live next door to you and me, very much in love with one another, with "Honey" under the positive belief that her husband is the greatest business man of all time.

TESTED TRUTHS

When in doubt—don't disregard the fact that you are.

Some men go about looking for temptation to yield to.

One cook may spoil the broth as completely as too many.

Love isolation long enough and you won't be able to break it.

The happiest are those who have helped others to be happy.

The lawyer deals in brains and disposes of them by the case.

It's a good memory that sometimes admits of discreet forgetfulness.

The engineer of a train of thought should stop to think occasionally.

Pluck is necessary, of course, always, but luck is not to be ignored.

It is useless to alter bad laws unless you are able to obey good ones.

The most unhappy of all men is he who believes himself to be so.—Homer.

Women are far more heroic than men—as any shoe dealer will tell you.

Many a good thing slips through a man's grasp because he is too previous.

Doctors are healthy as a rule—but, then, they never take their own medicine.

A great many more people might get into fights than do if mind reading were perfected.

A woman is seldom interested in her husband's letters unless they are marked "personal."

Serpent of Eden was willing to give apples away. He couldn't sell them for 10 cents apiece.

Golden rule is still extant, though many seem to prove the rule of brass more worldly servicable.

Too frequently when a man reaches the turn in the lane he finds that it turns in the wrong direction.

Play and Long Life Are Closely Allied

Since the life insurance business, one of the most prosperous and consistent in the country, is founded on the premise that the company knows just how long you ought to live, we have every reason to believe that the mortality tables, or whatever the technical name may be, are accurate.

In spite of the fast pace and the exacting requirements of modern business, fewer and fewer men are growing old before their time. And the principal reason for this is that they are learning to play.

It wasn't so very long ago that play was considered something that should be put away with childish things about the time the youth donned long trousers. Happily, the modern man of every age is able to appreciate the benefits of a regular play program in his life. As a result, he is working better and carrying his virility to a greater age.—Fond du Lac News.

Resourceful Writer

There was once an artist who was illustrating a novel. "It's a pity it's a love story," he said to the author, "because the only thing I can draw really well is a charging rhinoceros." "That's easy," replied the author, and turning to the passage where "he quailed before her proud glance," he inserted a few words and handed the manuscript to the artist, who read: "He, who had often faced a charging rhinoceros unmoved, now quailed."

And so the picture appeared, with the words: "He . . . faced a charging rhinoceros."—Open Road.

"Stella Dallas" Super-Film Comes to Lyceum Theatre

After weeks of dickering with United Artists Corporation, the management of the Lyceum theatre definitely announces that Samuel Goldwyn's romantic epic "Stella Dallas," adapted from the famous novel by Mrs. Olive Higgins Prouty, will open for a three day engagement, starting Tuesday.

BELLE BENNETT in "STELLA DALLAS"

The management also recommends "Stella Dallas" as one film that will live in the memory after it is seen. It is great in story, cast and superb in its heart-wringing appeal.

"Skinner" Makes Them Howl With Mirth at Lyceum

Reginald Denny has earned the right to be crowned King of Comedy. This amazing young actor conveys more with the lift of an inquiring eyebrow than many others can with their entire bodies.

Denny's flair for farce is not better exemplified than in his latest starring vehicle, "Skinner's Dress Suit," now playing to hilarious audiences at the Lyceum theatre.

"Skinner's Dress Suit" is a rib-tickling tale of a young married couple, the Skinners, who live in the suburbs. They are just the sort of married children who live next door to you and me, very much in love with one another, with "Honey" under the positive belief that her husband is the greatest business man of all time.
